

MUSIC OF THE BAROQUE

MOZART AND HIS MENTORS

APR 6/7

From Mysliveček to Brendel—the case for an international education

Today, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart is one of the most well-known composers of the 18th century. While Mozart's musical skills were apparent from an early age (his father Leopold called his talents "a gift from God"), Mozart's musicmaking truly flourished with the support of capable teachers. Mozart was introduced to two accomplished composers in his formative years abroad whose lasting impressions on the young composer contributed to many of the works we know and love today: Josef Mysliveček, renowned for his own Italian operas and his "Bohemian" flair, and Johann Adolph Hasse, whom Mozart praised in the dedication of his Opus III, K.10-15, collection to Queen Charlotte, "Because with your help, I will equal the glory of all the great men of my country, I will become as immortal as Handel and Hasse."

British pianist Imogen Cooper knows a thing or two about the impact of great mentors. The daughter of musicologist Martin Cooper, Imogen decided at the age of 5 that she wanted to become a concert pianist. She was then sent off, at just 11 years old, to study in Paris (alone!). This generated quite a bit of shock at home—her father publicly debated the decision with Thomas Armstrong, principal of the Royal Academy of Music, in a correspondence published in The Times.

In Paris, Imogen Cooper began her studies with French pianists Yvonne Lefébure and Jacques Février, who happened to be a personal friend of both Maurice Ravel and Francis Poulenc. Another encounter a few years later would change Cooper's life further, however: While in Austria, she heard piano superstar Alfred Brendel play for the first time. According to Cooper, “He was sensational. I marched up to him afterwards and said, ‘I must work with you or I’ll die.’” While notoriously demanding, Cooper and Brendel’s partnership blossomed into a collaboration that has spanned decades.

Mozart's Concerto for Two Pianos, K.365, performed by Imogen Cooper and Alfred Brendel with conductor Neville Marriner and the Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields.

The profound effect of these opportunities on her own artistic journey led to the creation of the Imogen Cooper Music Trust in 2015. Through scholarships and one-on-one intensives, Imogen Cooper shares the same personalized attention she once received with the next generation of musicians.

Experience the impact of these mentors and mentees live as Dame Jane Glover leads the Music of the Baroque Orchestra in Mysliveček's Symphony in F Major and Hasse's Symphony in G Minor, op. 5, no. 6, alongside Mozart's Paris

Symphony. Plus, Jane reunites with her dear friend Imogen Cooper for Mozart's virtuosic Piano Concerto No. 13. The concert on Sunday, April 6, at the North Shore Center in Skokie is nearly sold out, but good seats still remain for Monday, April 7, at the Harris Theater in downtown Chicago.

THE 2025-26 SEASON

Celebrate our Emerald Anniversary!

Beginning in September with our first-ever performances of Gluck's landmark opera Orfeo and Euridice and ending in May with Tallis's 40-part choral work "Spem in alium" and more, our 55th season is a musical summation of why we're still thriving after all these years:

- Our chorus, which listeners are "running out of superlatives to describe" (Chicago Classical Review), moves center stage in Orfeo and Euridice*, Messiah, Holiday Brass & Choral Concerts (Nicholas Kraemer's first!), and Celestial Voices
- Our top-notch orchestra, comprised of players from the Lyric Opera Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, and more, are showcased in Bach's Brandenburgs, Baroque Blockbusters, Mozart & His Mentors, and Vivaldi & Friends
- World-renowned guest soloists, including conductor/performers Richard Egarr and Fabio Biondi, Chicago native and virtuoso flutist Demarre McGill, countertenor Aryeh Nussbaum Cohen, and many others

And at every concert, you'll enjoy the sweeping drama, driving energy, and enthralling power of 17th- and 18th-century music.
